CRAPPY ASKERS OF STUPID QUESTIONS

Why do you keep using up all those trees to publish/print MAD magazine? Isn't there something more useful that could be done with those trees? And why when I unplug my computer cord does the green light take a few seconds to go out? Are those electrons still going through the cord?

Daniel S. Weinberg • Chicago, IL

Weinberg, Dead Ahead! — We thought it was interesting that you're so concerned about using paper, yet you wasted a sheet on your moronic letter. We guess you probably would've emailed, but you still haven't figured out how to plug your computer back in. (Hint: the pointy end goes into the wall!) -Ed.

GOOD TIMES AND DAD

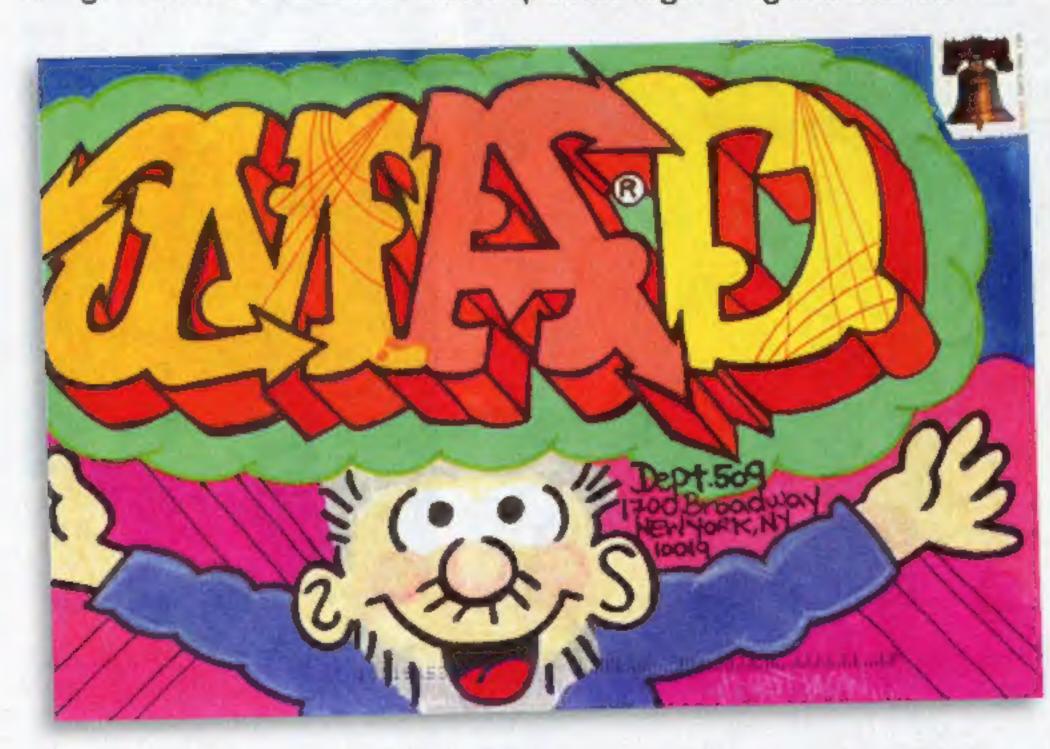

I love reading your magazine! It's one of the best things I've ever read (which isn't saying much because I don't read a lot)! My dad used to read your magazine all the time as a kid, he would ride his bike to the store on the first of each month and buy your magazine. I basically do the same, only I go once every two months and my mom gives me a ride to the store, and it costs three dollars more...but your magazine's still the best!

Sam Driscoll • Gilbert, AZ

Driscoll of the Wild — That's funny that your dad used to get MAD just like you did. It just goes to show you that some things never change...except for the price, the mode of transportation and the frequency. So, actually, most of the details changed quite a bit. On the other hand, your letter ended up being pretty stupid — just like Daniel S. Weinberg's! Look at that — some things never change! —Ed.

ENVELOPE OF THE MONTH

Thomas Pagan of Summit, IL sent in this Technicolor, graffiti-esque, Jaffeecentric envelope! Will this envelope inspire Al to finally give up studio work and get out on the streets to throw up some tags? Only time will tell...

AWARD TO THE WISEASS

MAD's Maddest Writer, the one and only Dick DeBartolo, was awarded the prestigious Inkpot Award at this year's San Diego Comic-Con! Congratulations, Dick! Just don't go getting a swelled head. You're not THAT great - after all, you write for MAD!

DISGUISE VS. SPIES

Every single Halloween it's the same problem! You end up completely paralyzed when it comes time to pick out a costume! There are just too many options to choose from! And let's face it, you can't go as a slutty French maid again - everyone was VERY clear about that! Thankfully, elope.com has come to the rescue with these amazing black and white Spy costumes!

TO AIRPORT IS HUMAN

My name is Cathy Gaines Mifsud...YES! That's Gaines...G-A-I-N-E-S.

This is a letter of complaint. My travel agent, Gary Goldstein, has read MAD Magazine since he was a wee tot...and he is old now...very, very, old. When Gary left on his most recent trip to Mexico, he discovered that there were NO MAD Magazines to be found in the entire airport. How can that be? Is the city of Baltimore boycotting MAD? Are the airlines boycotting MAD? Is this happening in ALL airports? What the hell is going on?

Since we all know that MAD supports nepotism, I hope that I have some pull in getting MAD Magazine back into the Baltimore airports. This is blasphemy!

Ghoulishly yours,

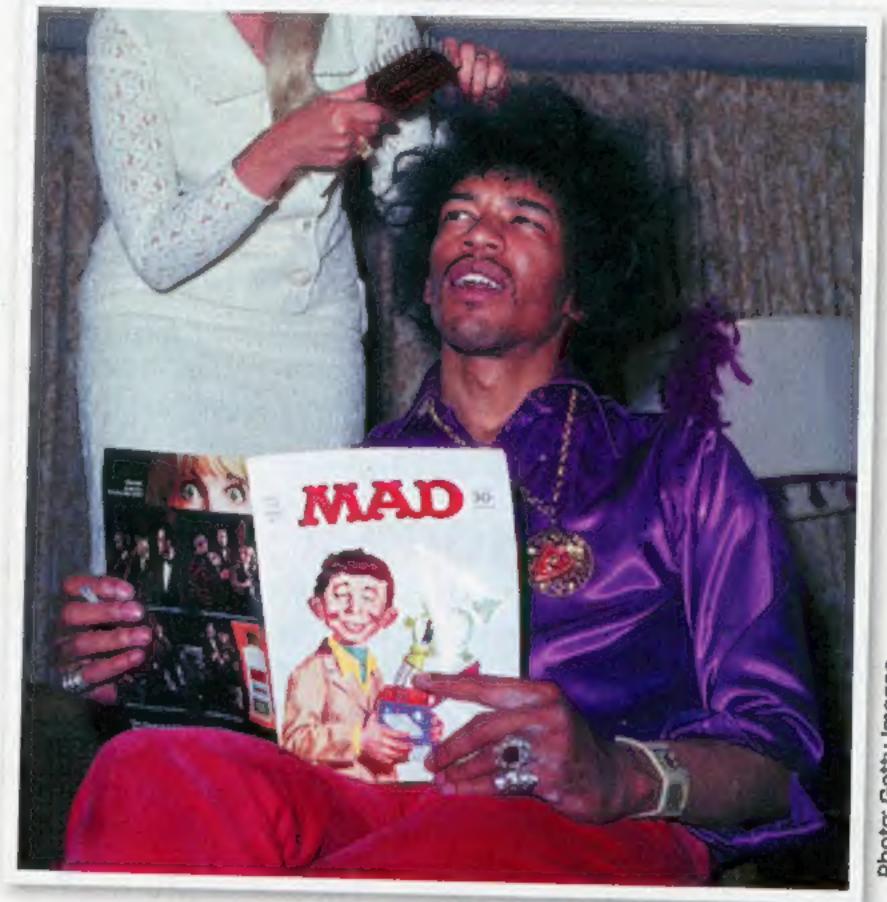

Cathy Gaines Mifsud, President • William M. Gaines Agent, Inc.

Sudsy — Clearly, this is a big problem for airports. More uncomfortable than the full body scan. More distressing than the fajitas at Chili's Too. More disturbing than a cross-country flight showing The Lincoln Lawyer on a continuous loop! Still, while the FAA sorts that whole mess out, if ol' Gary's having trouble finding MAD, why doesn't he take the plunge and subscribe today! (By calling 1-800-4-MADMAG or going to madmag.com). Or is he so old that he doesn't want to make that long a commitment? —Ed.

CELEBRITY SNAPS

Recently, Life.com did a photo feature on the history of MAD. While they were researching the piece, they unearthed this amazing shot of Jimi Hendrix reading an issue, from some time in 1968! Head over to Life.com and check out "MAD Magazine: A Semi-Secret History" for all the photos and factoids!

HIDE AND SNEAK

I have been a reader of your magazine for five years now, and I think your TV show is hilarious. Normally I would run up to my local grocery store and buy the magazine with no problems, but now MAD is hidden behind the other magazines, like they're embarrassed of you! How could this happen?

Jacob Wilhelm • Logansport, IN

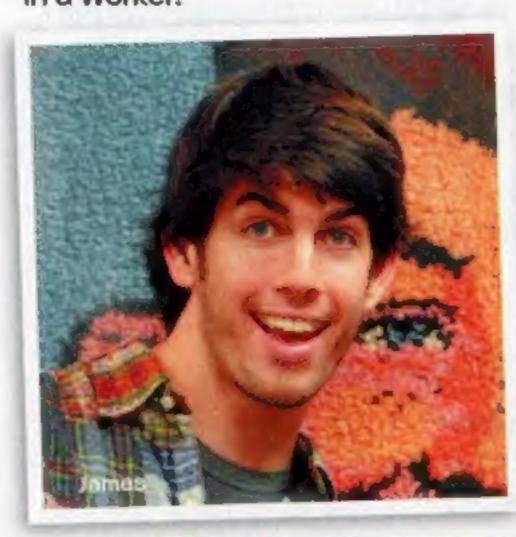

Let's Jake a Deal — You've got it all wrong — we're hiding because WE'RE embarrassed! Who wants to be seen with all those covers showing the Kardashian wedding, Jennifer Lopez's divorce, and, worst of all, the new Land Rover Evoque (shame on you, Autoweek)! But keep digging and you're bound to find us. And if that fails, look for us in the frozen foods section! -Ed.

WHOOPS!

At MAD, we pride ourselves on our accuracy and journalistic integrity. After all, we were among the first to alert the public about the specific warning signs of a ventriloquist going bad (MAD #510). Which is why we were mortified to learn that in MAD #511, we misidentified our Alfred E. Neuman look-alike as Barrett Buscher. Barrett sent in the pic, but the mascot-mugged individual was actually Alex Paris. Our deepest apologies to Barrett for the unfortunate mistake. And even deeper apologies to Alex for his unfortunate lot in life!

EMPLOYEES OF THE MONTHS

It's time for us to give a huge thanks to our summer editorial interns, Jacob Thompson and James Grebey! They were hard-working, punctual, talented and professional. Suffice to say, they didn't fit in here at all! Sorry guys maybe someday you'll find a workplace that actually values those qualities in a worker!

TOYS WILL BE TOYS

I, like everyone else, have noticed the special Spy vs. Spy figurines and I really like the ones done by Gavin Strange and Bill Amend and I was wondering if we would ever be able to get our hands on one of these?

Graeme Frelick • Toronto, Canada

Takes a Frelicking — Hold up — are you trying to "get your hands" on the toys...or on Gavin Strange and Bill Amend? You stay away from them, you sicko! Right now, there are no plans to make any of those toys available for sale — so either way, you'll just have to keep your hands to yourself! —Ed.

READER ALERT

If you had the EXTREMELY good fortune to have your letter printed, your good luck ain't over yet, pappy! You'll also be getting the Jurassic Park Ultimate Trilogy (on Blu-ray/DVD Oct. 25), courtesy of our friends at Universal Pictures, a Batman: Year One Combo Pack (including a Blu-ray, DVD AND digital copy) courtesy of our pals at Warner Home Video, The Best of the Rejection Collection: 293 Cartoons That Were Too Dumb, Too Dark, or Too Naughty for The New Yorker, from of our amigos at Workman Publishing; and from our chums at Cartoon Network, you'll get a DVD copy of Adventure Time: My Two Favorite People AND a Deluxe 10-inch Finn figure with changing faces! We're just too good to you! If you missed out, don't get your knickers in a twist, they're all on sale now (or soon after!)

MAD #513 is on sale December 20!

I always had my partner's back! And the same goes for his widow. I had her back. And her front, too!

Just to be clear — it's not cheating if you have sex with your husband's best friend while your husband is comatose. Although it's polite to move him out of the bed first! What can I say? I go for a man in uniform. I once slept with the entire day shift at Chuck E. Cheese. But don't judge me for what I did, and who I did, and in how many positions. I'd been given false information that my husband was dead! That's when I went through the classic five stages of grief: denial, anger, depression, horniness and infection!

I'm her kid, Kid! This has been a confusing time for me. I have all the natural, normal fears of any kid adjusting to a second father. Can I love him as much? Should I call him Daddy? And will my real dad come back and eat my face?

THE MAD OBITUARY PAGES

Jehosephat Frye, 47, Dead

A competitive eater has swallowed his last mouthful of junk.

Jehosephat Frye, who gained fame by winning the Coke & Mentos Challenge in 2005, as well as the Kraft Cheddar Slab Open earlier this year, was found dead in his bathtub last night, surrounded by Pringles.

Frye had very few interests aside from eating, and trained up to 18 hours a day. In a 2009 interview, Frye listed his favorite foods as chili burgers, fried chicken, and vodka.

Cause of death is unknown, though "heart failure" is a pretty good bet. He was 47, and, shockingly, unmarried. His parents request that you not make fun of his death, even though it was kind of humorous.

Sargon McGibbet, 59

Sargon McGibbet, the controversial crossword puzzle creator for the tiny New York Bleater has died at his domicile at the age of 59 from improperly-prepared fugu.

McGibbet gained notoriety in 1998 by giving the clue "Hero to millions," to which the answer was "Lucifer." His book, I'm Smarter Than Everyone, did well on the Bleater Bestseller List, but not any other papers'.

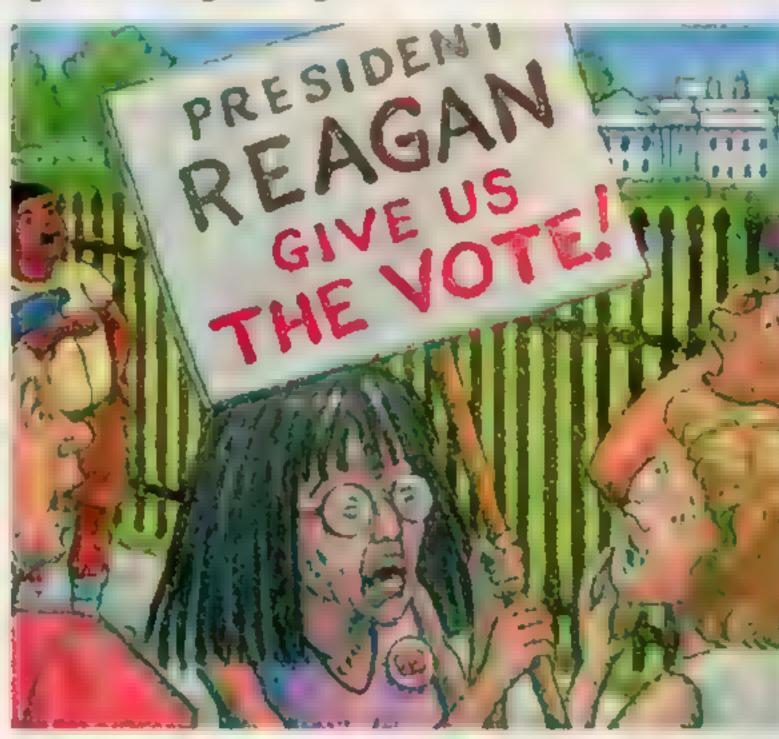

He is survived by his wife Terpsichore, son Chattahoochee, and daughter Agronomical.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that you just send cash, preferably in tens and twenties. The wake/yard sale will be held Sunday at Big Ed's Swap Meet & Chapel. Fondly remember/everything must go!

Serendipity Wong, 45

Serendipity Wong, the wealthy, socially-committed socialite, has died.

Throughout her short life, Wong was a tireless campaigner for women's right to vote, which, considering she lived in the U.S. during the second half of the 20th Century, was considered a complete waste of time. Her wealthy, easy-scrabble upbringing compelled her to help those less fortunate than she was, leading to numerous arrests while protesting various obscure causes, like increased medical coverage for transgender guava farmers in Bolivia.

Wong, who was never married, had life-long premonitions of premature burial, so you might want to check every now and then at Greenish Acres cemetery, starting this Saturday. She was also an organ donor, so first come, first served.

Unidentified Headless Torso

Caucasian male, between 25-30. He will be deeply missed.

Vlad Gzhmlsdizech, 90

Vlad Gzhmlsdizech, the eccentric strongman dictator who ruled the small Baltic state of Gunkovia from 1937-1989 is dead.

Gzhmlsdizech made news during World War II by siding with the Nazis on odd-numbered days and with the Allies on even-numbered ones. In the following decades, he angered Gunkovians by officially shutting down all media outlets except the ones he ran, a period he dubbed "The Great Progression of Freedom."

Gzhmlsdizech's reign came to an abrupt end when he was overthrown by the 7-year-old grandson of a political rival. He spent the rest of his days in exile.

He was never married and produced no children, so draw your own conclusions. Gunkovians certainly did. Celebrations are expected to last through the weekend, and gloaters can view the funeral at vladsfuneral.com (Must have RealPlayer 7 or higher).

Sir Henry Northwestforshireham, 78

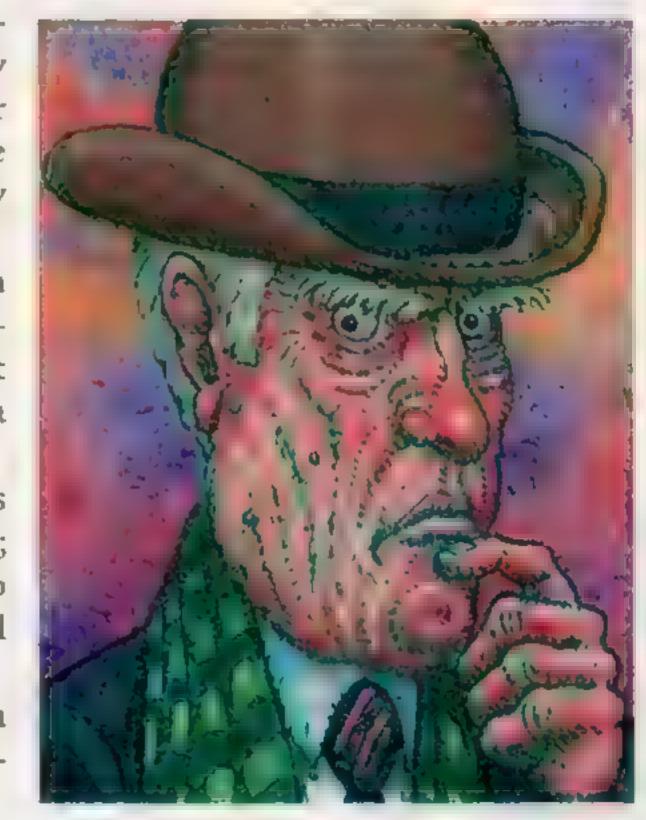

Sir Henry Northwestforshireham, the esteemed English mystery author who created the Inspector Piccadilly series, has died at the age of 78 — unless it was actually his twin brother.

Sir Henry died with a dagger in his back, in a locked room, holding a white chess rook in his right hand, his left hand pointing to a bust of Julius Caesar.

He is survived by Allison, his estranged wife who hated him; Clive, the younger brother who stood to inherit a fortune; and Reginald, the butler.

If you have any information on the death, be at Hyde Park at midnight on the 24th. Come alone.

Kitty Byrd-Braine, 43

The non-human community lost a friend on Thursday, as the longtime animal rights activist and nature photographer Kitty Byrd-Braine was mauled to death by a lion on safari in Kenya.

Byrd-Braine's friends remember the 43-year-old as being "basically a good person, but really overbearing and tedious on the whole animal rights thing." Fittingly, at the time of her death, she was busy translating the Bible into dolphin squeaks, but only got as far as Deuteronomy. Ironically, the lion that attacked her choked to death eating Byrd-Braine.

Byrd-Braine's funeral arrangements have still not been announced, although the lion's have been.

Who's the first guy who came up with the idea of juggling? Like, was there some caveman who once picked up a hot potato and started throwing it back and forth between his hands, and everyone was like, "Hey, do that again!"?

November 5, 2011

"Paranormal Activity" movies, they shouldn't be calling them "Paranormal Activity" anymore. If something's happened three times, it's just "Normal Activity."

November 6, 2011

So, I really like this girl in my class, Chelsea Hamilton. She's the editor of the school newspaper, and really cool, and she looks sort of like Reese Witherspoon, if Reese Witherspoon were in the seventh grade. And I've been trying and trying to talk to her, so I can ask her to the Pilgrimfest Dance later this month, but she doesn't even notice me. Like, literally, doesn't notice me. We were assigned as lab partners in biology last week, and she turned to me and said, "So, did you just transfer to this school?" And I said, "No. We've gone to school together for the past seven years." And she said, "Ha ha, very funny, I think I'd remember that. So, where did you transfer from?" And I said, "Ohio." It just seemed less embarrassing for both of us.

November 7, 2011

This morning in homeroom, the captain of our wrestling team, Scott Scanlon, showed up with glasses — he said that he got them over the weekend. "My parents think I've never done so good in school 'cause I can't see the blackboard, so they sent me to an optimist to get my eyes checked, and now I can see more goodly." (I think that sentence may help to explain why I don't think Scott's eyesight is why he hasn't done well in school. Unless maybe his optometrist also has a really positive outlook on life.)

Then later in the lunchroom, I overheard Chelsea talking to her friends about Scott, and how much she liked his new glasses, because they make him look so smart. If they can make Scott look smart, I bet glasses would make me look like a genius!

Now I just need to figure out how to get myself some glasses. Ugh, I wish my eyesight were worse. Scott's so lucky to have crappy eyes.

November 8, 2011

So, last night, I started trying to get my parents to get me glasses. I told them I thought my eyesight was bad, and my mom said, "Well, what are you having trouble seeing?" And I said, "Everything." And my dad said, "It can't be everything. Are you nearsighted, or farsighted? Are you having trouble seeing stuff that's close to you, like your textbooks? Or far away, like the TV?" And I said, "Which is the one where I can watch TV, but can't read my school books?" And he said, "That's farsighted." And I said, "That's what I am." My parents looked a little suspicious, but they made me an appointment with the eye doctor anyway.

November 9, 2011

Went to the eye doctor today. He started trying different lenses for each of my eyes, and each time, he'd say, "Better, worse, same?" And I was answering at random until he said, "A minute ago, you said that lens was better, and now you say it's worse." Which seemed uncool of him, to pull a trick question like that. But from then on out, I said every single lens was better than the one before it, until he finally said, "Well, these are the strongest lenses we have." And I said, "Awesome!" I bet Chelsea Hamilton will be really impressed when I tell her my prescription's way stronger than Scott's.

November 13, 2011

We picked up my new glasses at LensCrafters today. I don't know why that place is called LensCrafters. To me, "craft" means you made something with, like, glue and felt and papier mache. Like, if they made your glasses out of pipe cleaners and googly eyes, then they'd be LensCrafting. They're just LensMakers.

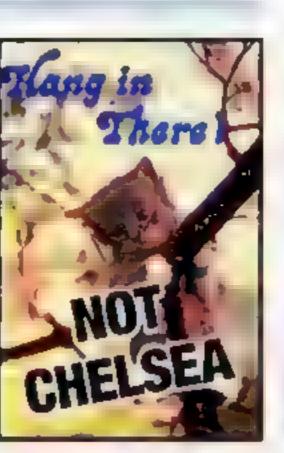

Anyway, I got home with the glasses and put them on. I'm not sure how I look in them, because I can't see myself in the mirror when I'm wearing them. I showed them to my little sister Sophie, though, and she said, "Whoa! Cool!" And I said, "They look good?" And she said, "They make your eyes look so huge! You're like an anime character!" Which is probably good, right?

November 14, 2011

I wore my glasses to school for the first time today. I walked right up to Chelsea and said, "Hey, Chelsea! Notice anything different about me?" And she said, "I notice that you're late for class, but if you hurry, I won't write you up for it." And then I took my glasses off and discovered that the blurry thing I thought was Chelsea was actually Mrs. Plimpton, our vice-principal. (And by the way: these are some pretty impressive glasses if they can make Mrs. Plimpton look like anything but Mrs. Plimpton.) As the morning went on, I also mistook our school janitor, a trash can, and a motivational poster of a kitten hanging from a branch for Chelsea.

Finally, at lunch, my friend Chuck pointed me in Chelsea's direction, and I walked over to say hi to her. And I was halfway there when I walked right into an eighth grader's tray full of Sloppy Joes. Man, they call those things "sloppy" for a reason — they go everywhere.

Later in the day, my friend Brian ran up to Chuck and me in the hallway and said, "Hey, did you hear? Some dorky new kid from Ohio totally embarrassed himself in the cafeteria today! Hey — what happened to your shirt?"

November 17, 2011

Chelsea Hamilton and Scott Scanlon are officially dating, and they're going to the dance tomorrow night. Chuck tried to comfort me by saying, "Look: You did everything you could. But maybe it's not the glasses that Chelsea likes. Maybe it's the fact that he's got a huge neck and sort of looks like that guy from "Captain America". So, you know...you never had a chance." I hate it when Chuck tries to comfort me.

To make things worse, I needed to figure out a way to explain to my parents that I won't be wearing my glasses anymore. So tonight at dinner, I announced that I didn't need my glasses anymore: "My vision's suddenly fine again! It's a miracle!" And my parents looked at me for a long moment, and then my dad said, "So, what was her name?" And I said, "Chelsea." And he said, "Did it work?" And I said, "No." And he said, "Well, tell you what: It's a shame to let a nice, expensive pair of glasses like that go to waste. So how about you get a little more wear out of them — say, anytime you want to watch TV for the next three weeks or so?"

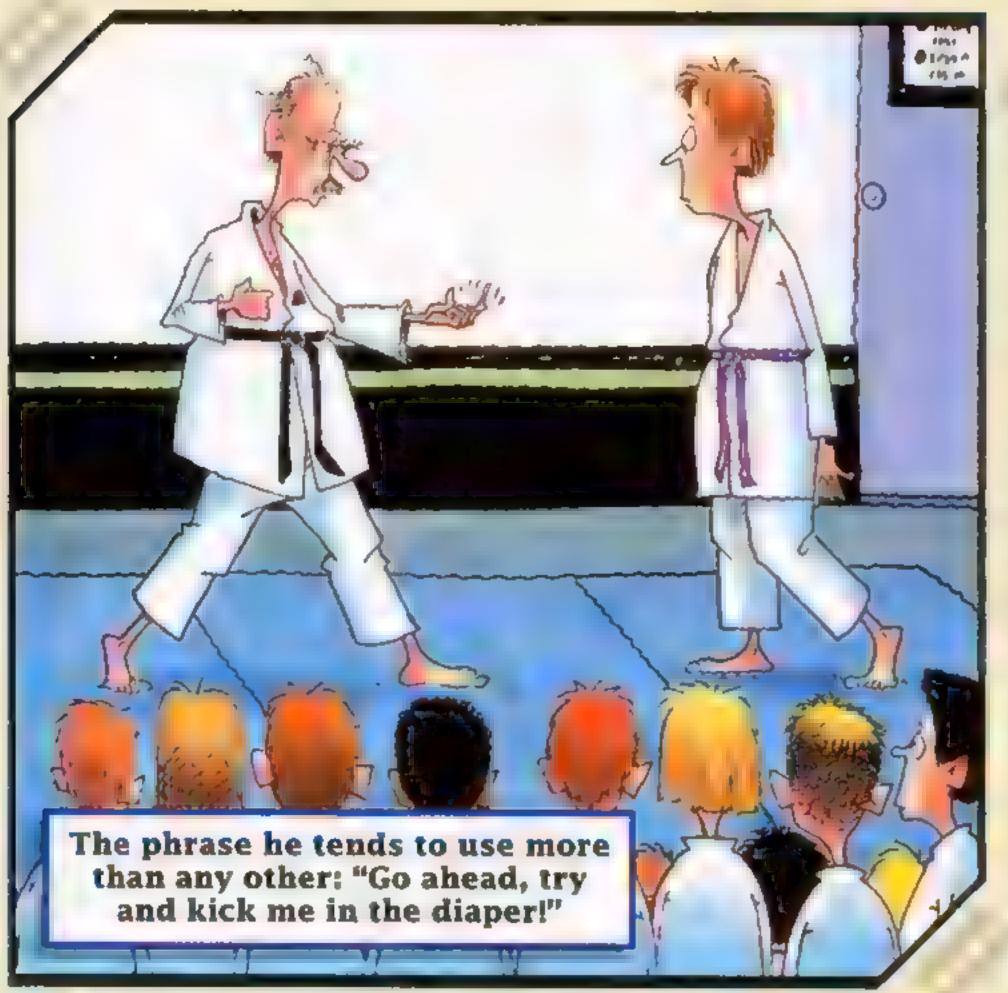

So, if you'll excuse me, I should get going. A new "Big Bang Theory" is on, and I can't wait to hear it.

BIRTH OF A COMBINATION DEPT.

Sometimes it seems as if Hollywood doesn't make original movies any more, they just make sequels. Then, sequels to sequels. And don't even get us started on prequels! What's next? Well, if their streak of unoriginality continues, how long before the film industry starts combining hit movies in an effort to milk every last cent out of a franchise? Well, we here at MAD are also known for our lack of originality, so we're beating Tinseltown execs at their own game with the following two-pager called...

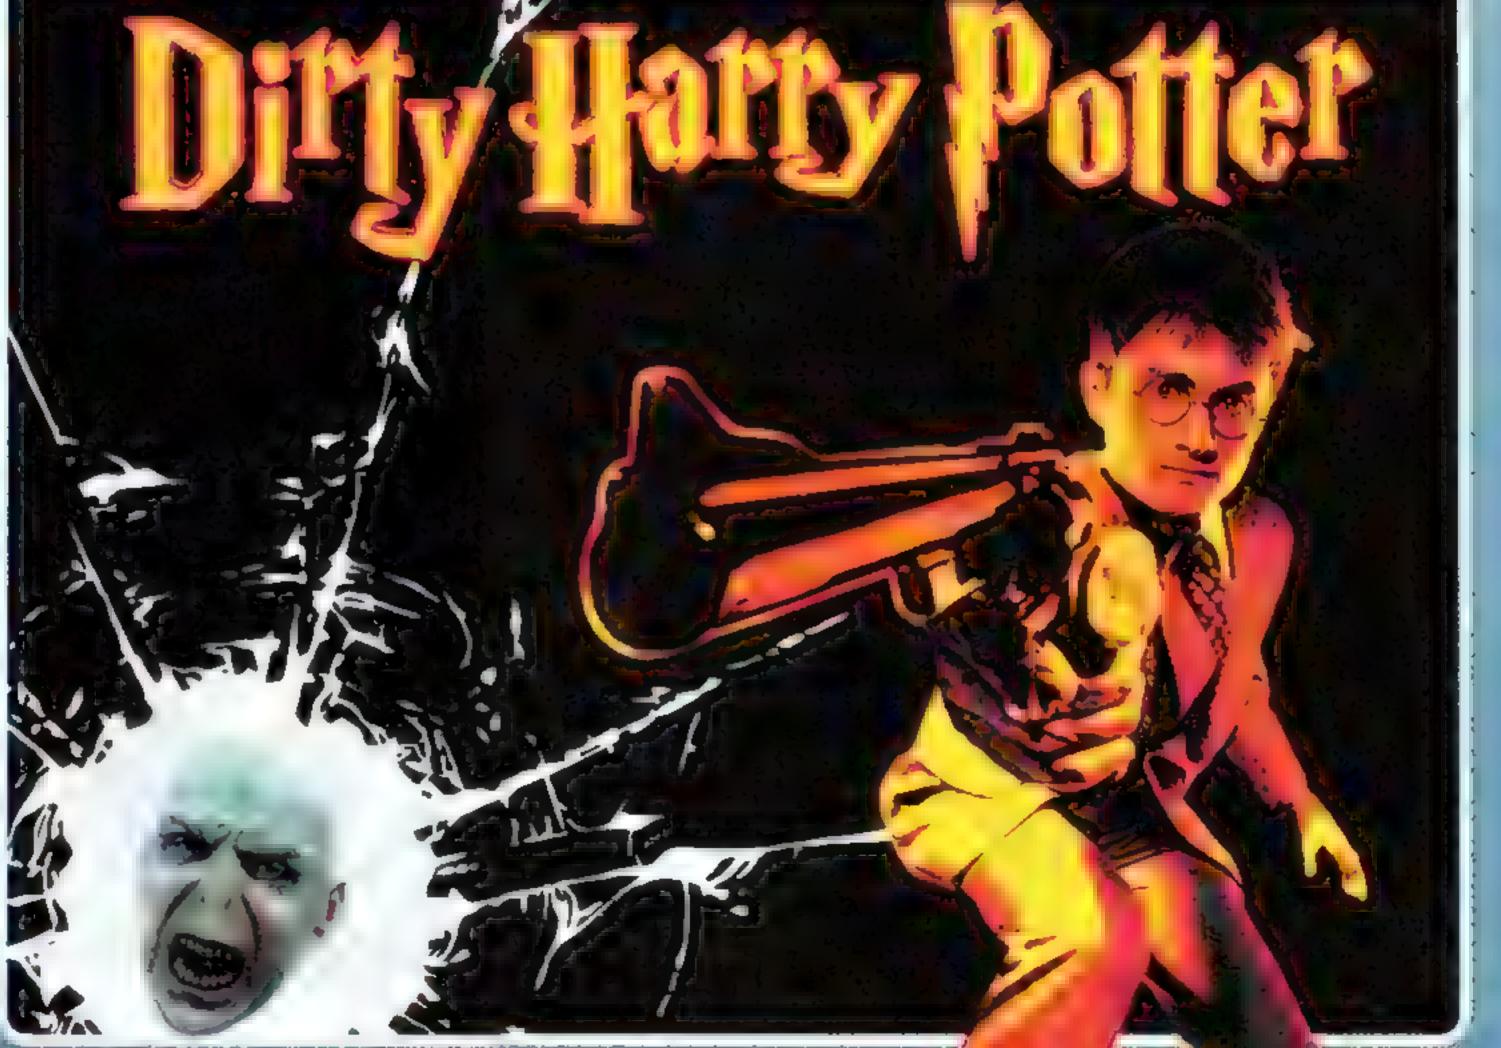

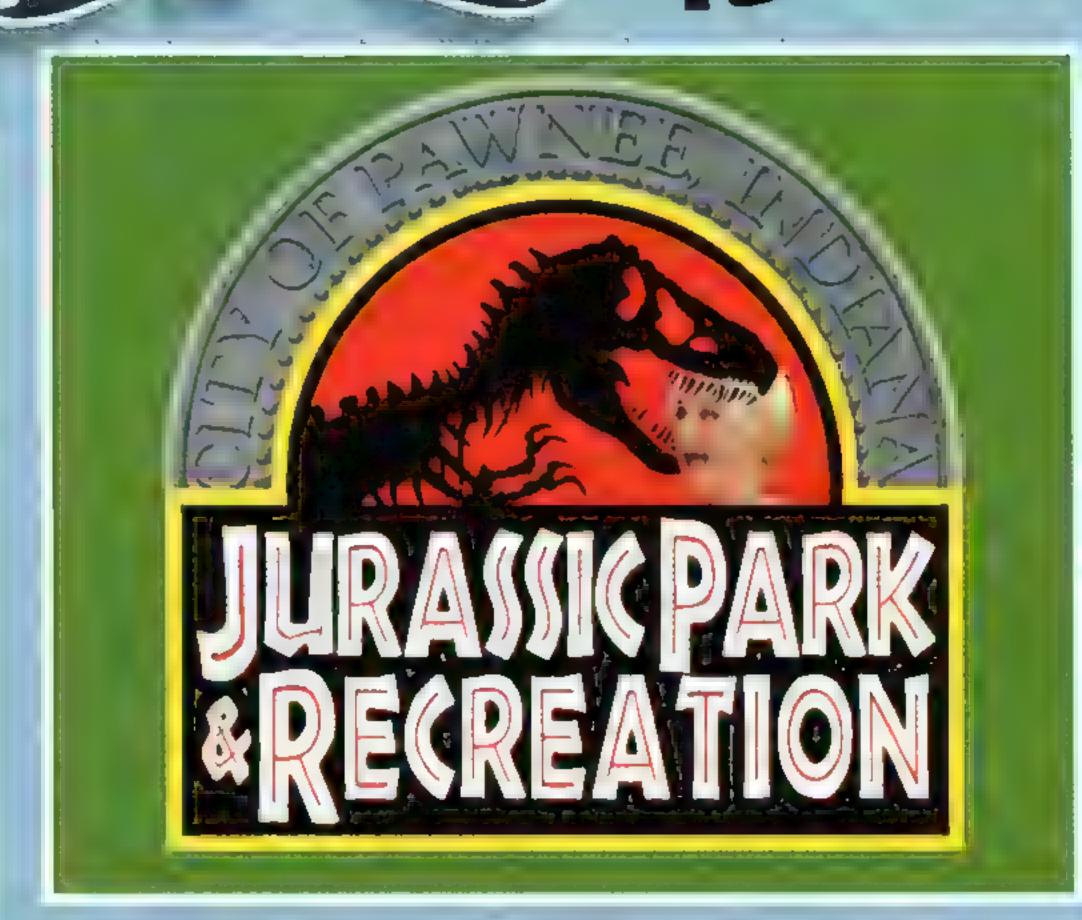

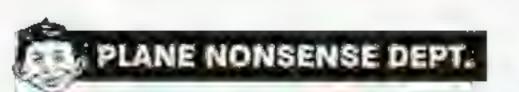

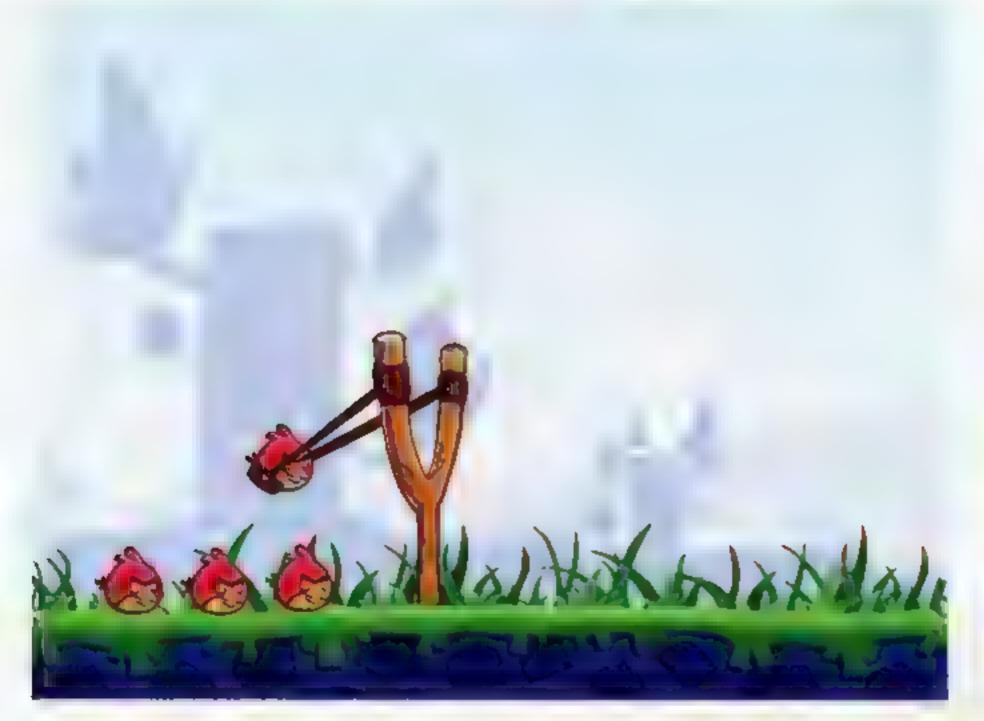

One Day on the Hudson River (What Really Happened)

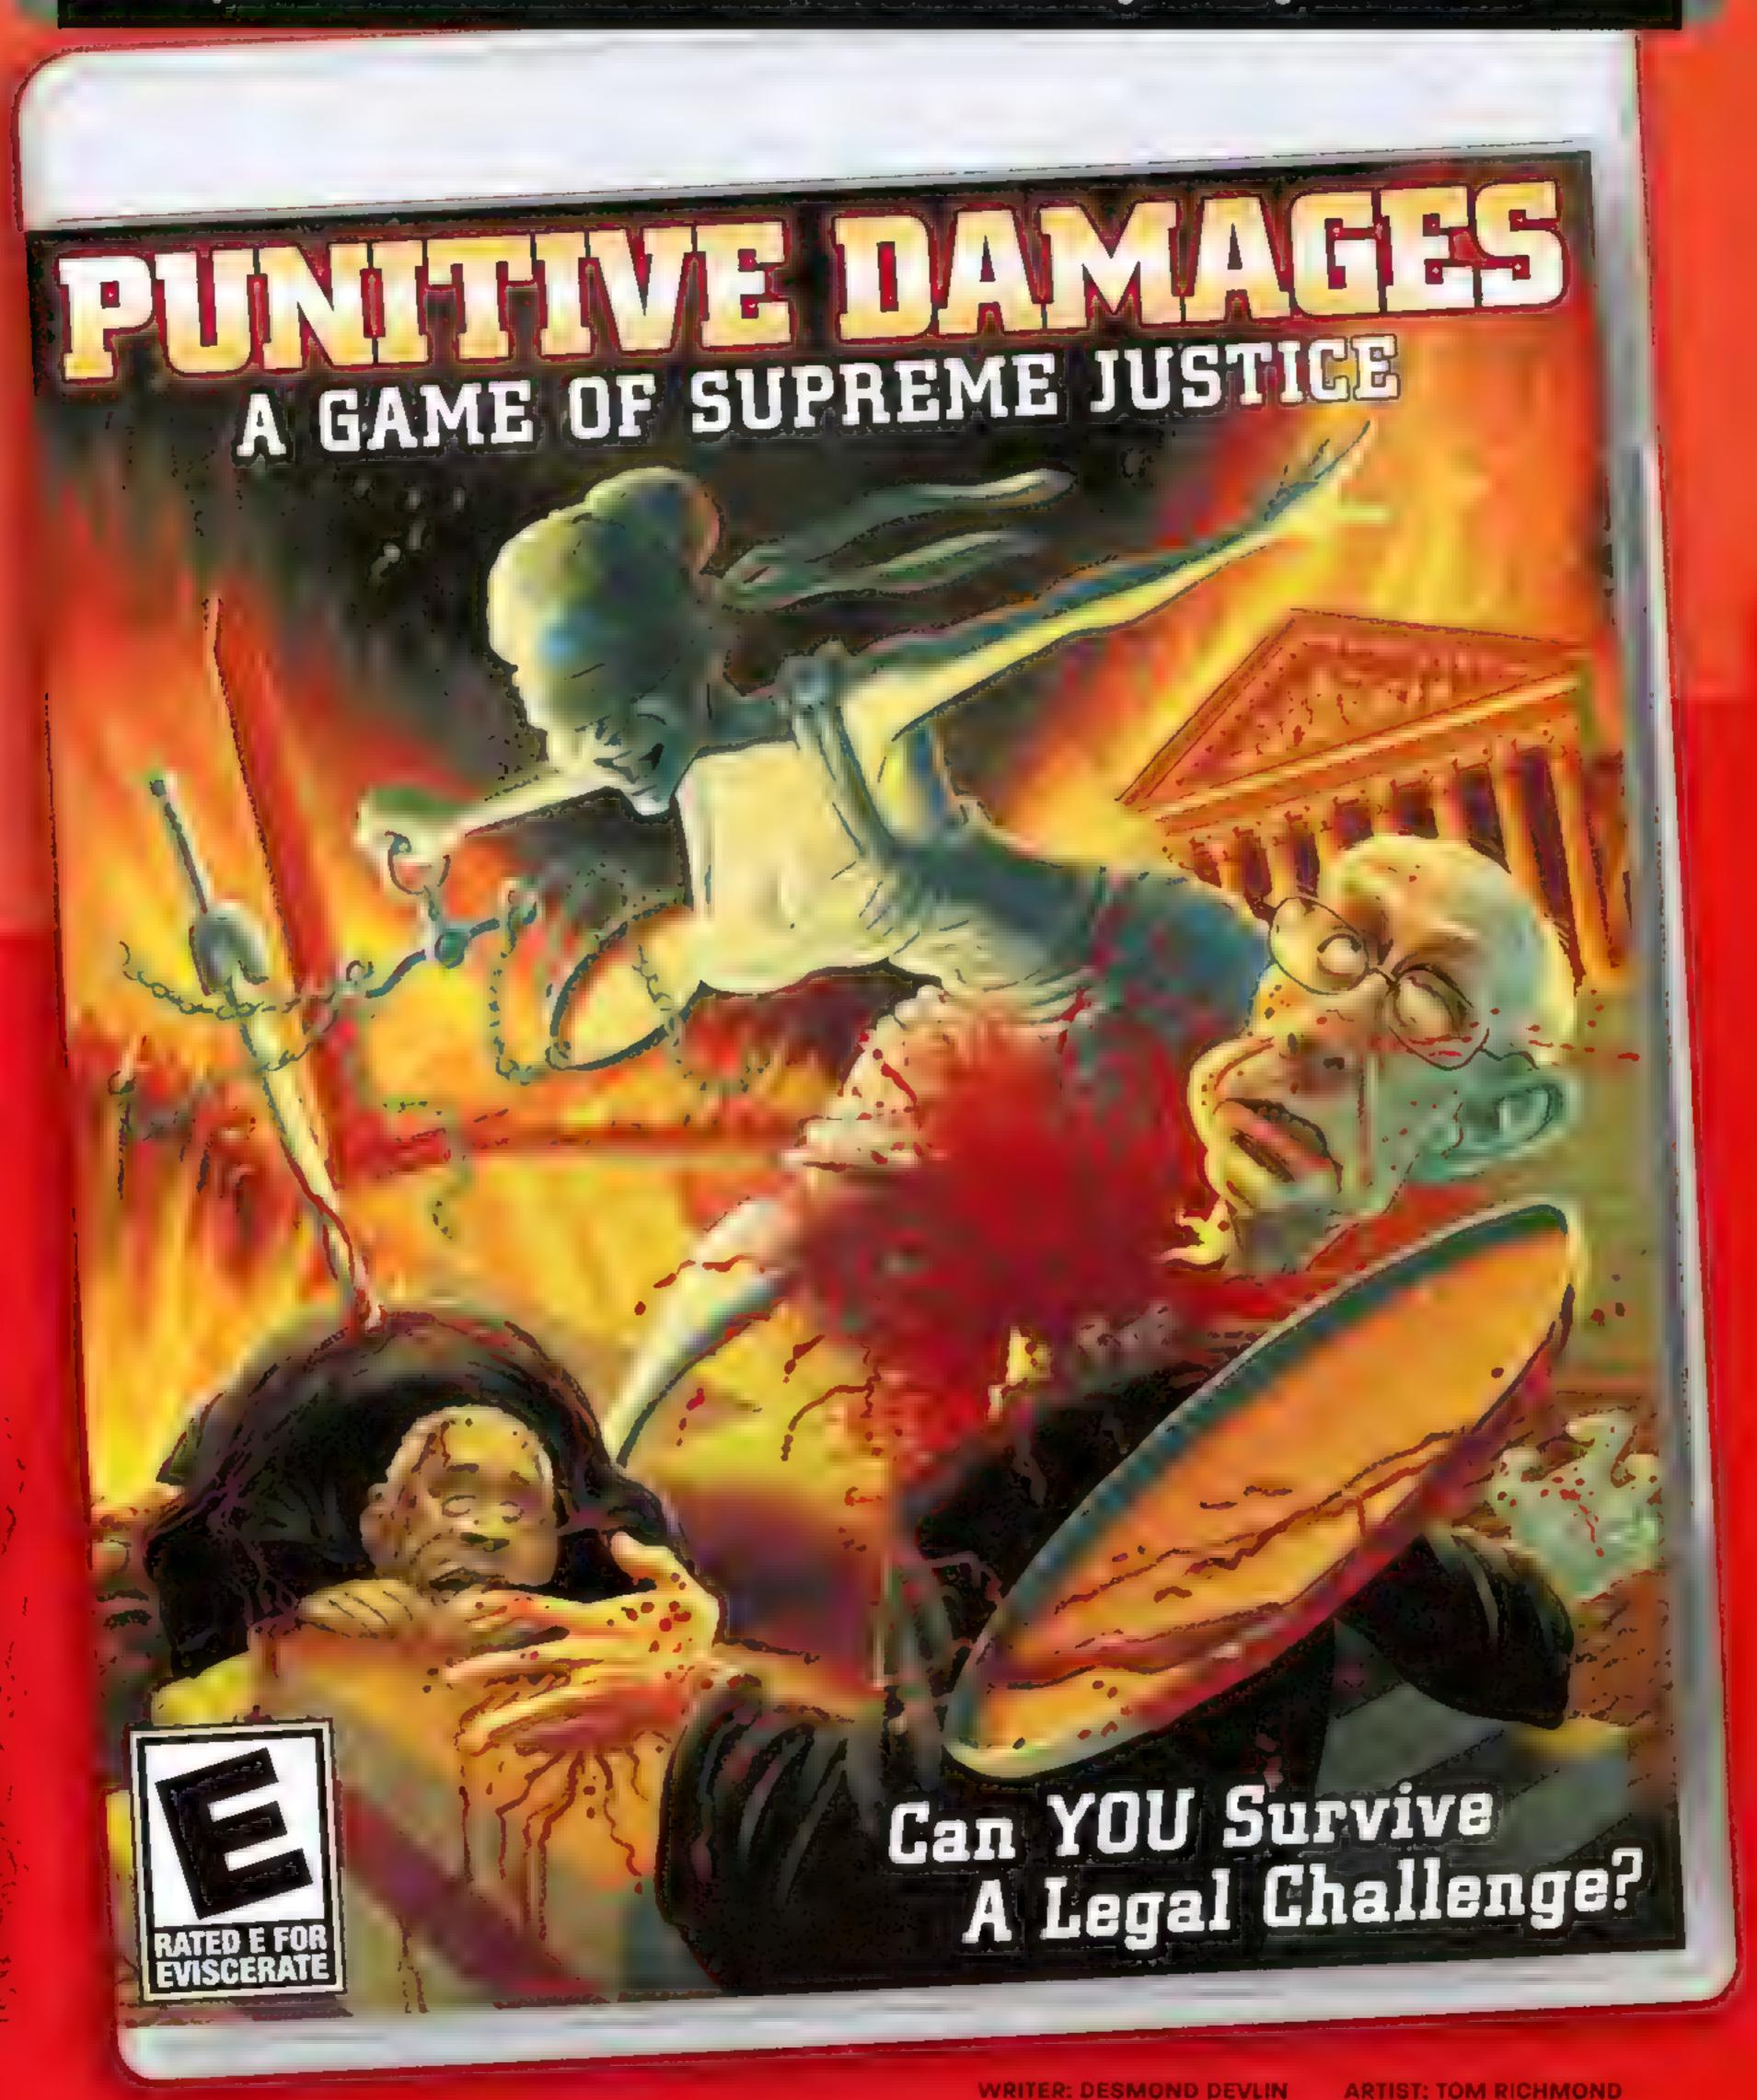

Recently, the Supreme Court invalidated a California law intended to regulate the sale of violent video games to children. They went so far as to classify video games as art, and afforded it the same first amendment protections as books, plays, movies and music, no matter how sick, violent or vulgar the game is. This got our sick, violent, vulgar, yet very artistic minds wondering: how would the Supreme Court like it if THEY were the victim in a violent videogame? We're sure it's just what the Justices had in mind! Here's a walkthrough of the game we call...

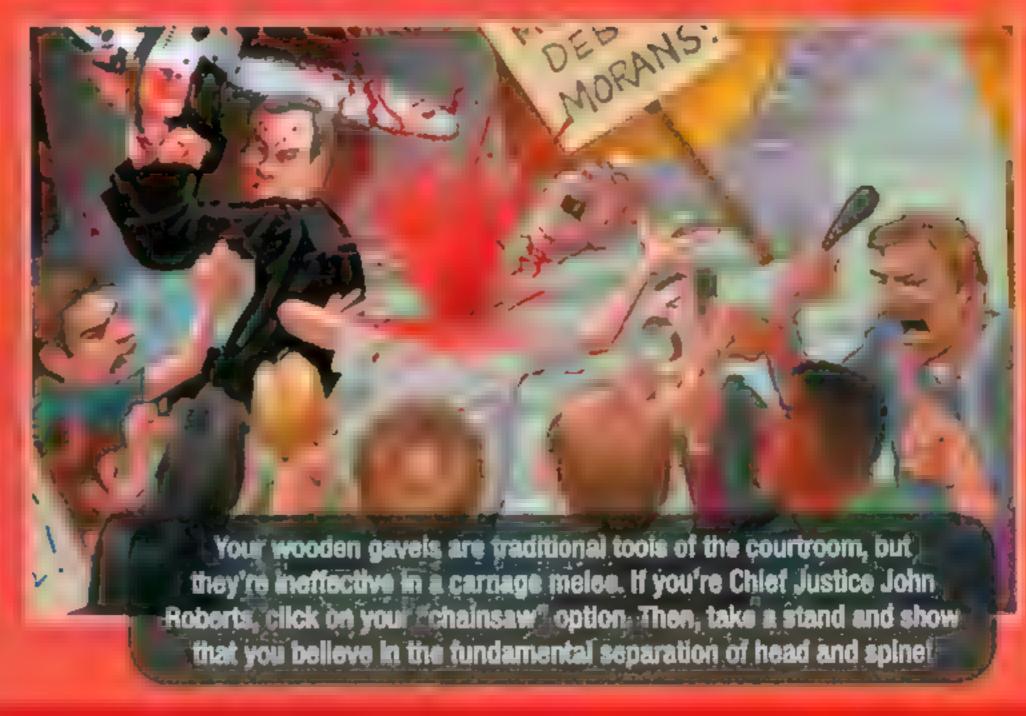

LEVEL ONE First Monday in October

There are 33 steps leading up to the marble hall of justice that defines and protects our nation's liberty. That means there are 33 places to die. Get safely into the courthouse building by navigating the nine Justices past roving bands of Gitmo protesters, Death Penalty protesters, Birthers, Truthers, and one guy who's still ticked off about Marbury v. Madison.

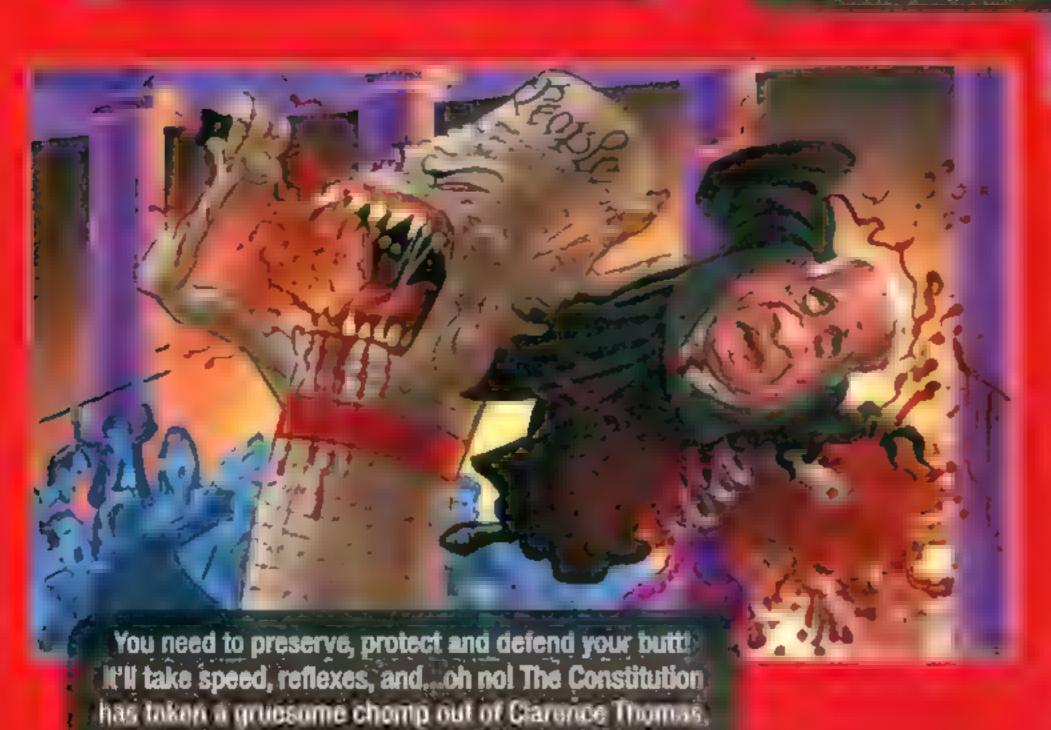

LEVEL TWO Law of the Jungle

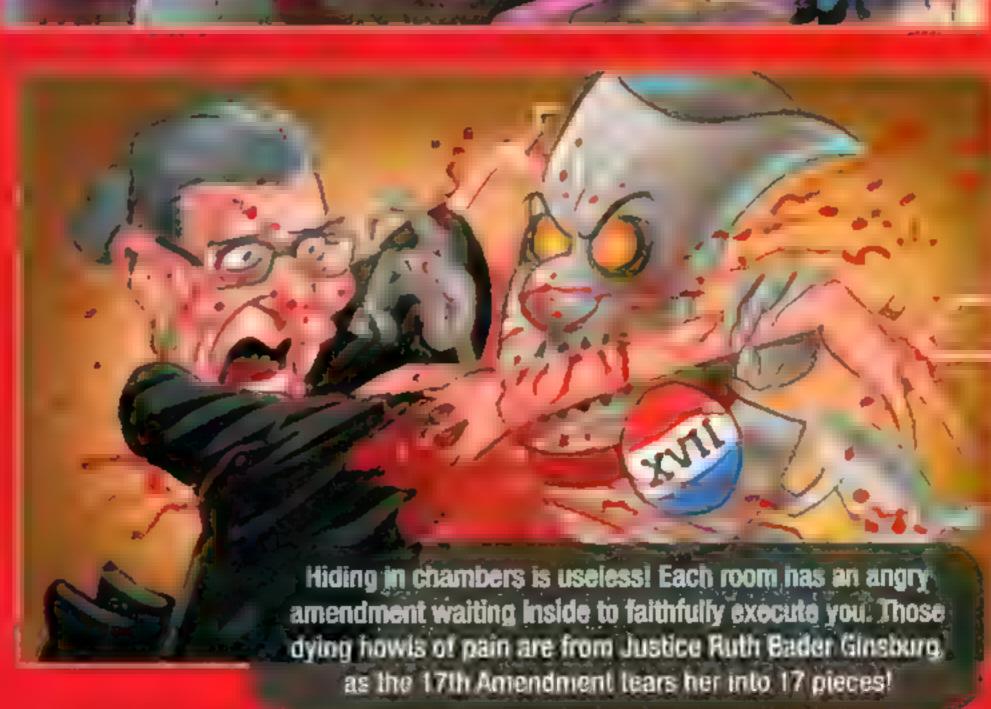

Sotomayor's eye sockets! Now justice really is blind!

The genius of our Constitution is that it is a living, breathing document. But after 200 years of being battered, abused and misinterpreted, it's hungry — for judicial blood!

This Constitution wants to insure anything EXCEPT demostic tranquility!
Using expendable Supreme Court Clerks to block the document's progress is useless — its power is unimpeachable!

and now he really IS 3/5ths of a person!

LEVEL THREE Changeable Chad Challenge

Following the 2000 election, the Supreme Court controversially stepped in and ended the Florida recount, handing the Presidency to George W. Bush. But today, it's time for gore, gore, gore! Escape the Supreme Court Building by leaping from the roof and onto an aerial path of rickety Florida Butterfly Ballots!

LEVEL FOUR Our Frending Fathers

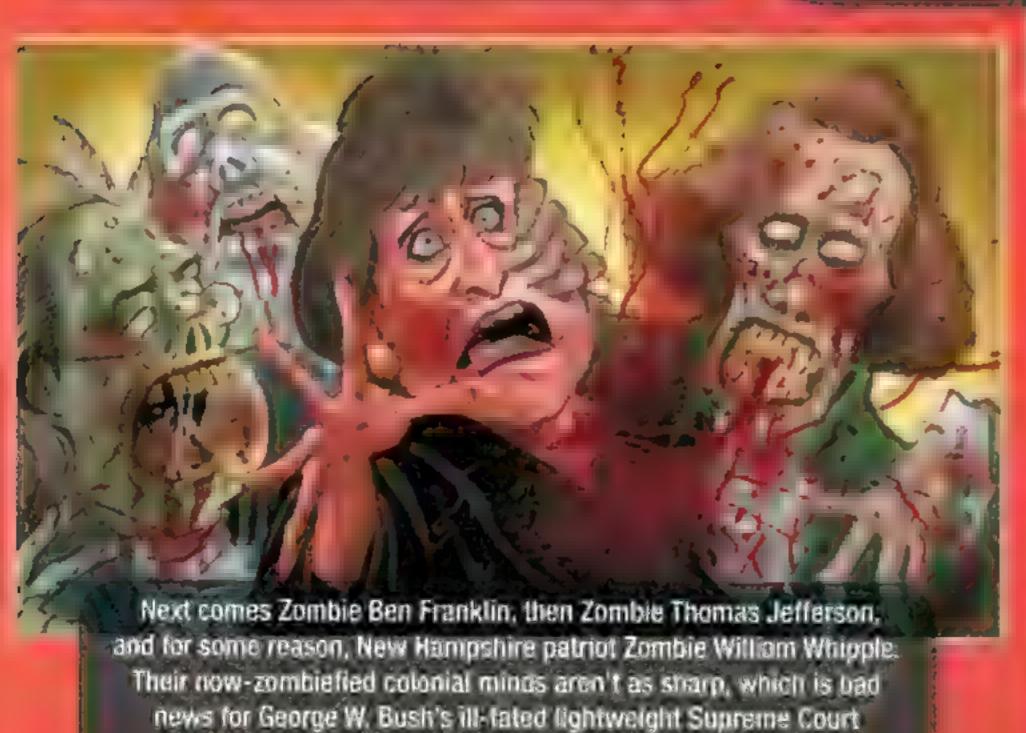

Antonin Scalia also meets a cruel and unusual fate!

His jowly head becomes fatally wedged in one of the little square spaces. It's a hanging chad for a hanging judge!

Any still-surviving Justices may have escaped the court building, but there's plenty more action on the D.C. Maul! A responsible Supreme Court Justice always seeks to divine the Founding Fathers' original intent. But 235 years later, their only intent is a gnawing zombie desire for legal flesh!

Zombie George Washington is first. Again. He still seeks to win the hearts of his country men, starting with unlucky Chief Justice John Roberts Roberts' still-beating heart in easily hacked from his chest plate by George's trusty hatchet. and the President's anapping wooden teeth do the rest!"

nominee Harriet Miers, who is devoured in the bloody confusion!
